- The X profile alone does not prove that the account is operated by the individual named in the bio.

DATA COLLECTION LIMITATIONS

- Network analysis, temporal analysis, and topic analysis were all rate-limited; no tweet data, interaction counts, hashtags, or keywords were collected.
- No data on followers' or following lists were available.

CONFIDENCE NOTES

- Given the lack of independent verification and the limited data available, confidence in attributing the X account to the individual named in the bio is low.
- No definitive evidence of ownership can be established from the current information.

Data Collection Limitations

- Analysis is based only on data successfully retrieved during this investigation.
- Tweet availability can be affected by X request limits and scraper account availability.
- The requested tweet count is configurable and the report identifies the actual retrieved sample.
- Mention analysis is not a complete social-network graph.
- The retrieved tweet sample does not represent the account's complete historical activity.
- A Wikipedia source and an X account do not independently prove common ownership.
